RICHARD DUPONT, "Tomorrow Again,"
Caren Golden, 526 West 26th Street, (212) 727-8304 (through Feb. 22). From the side, Mr. Dupont's life-size self-portrait sculpture looks normal; from the front you realize it's weirdly thin — by 30 percent, in fact, thanks to computer technology. The artist's wife, wearing similarly generic black and beige clothes, has been stretched to 10 feet, like an elasticized comic-book hero. Exhibited in a plexiglass vitrine like a natural-history-museum specimen, she has an eerie presence (Johnson).
